A Design Philosophy of “Radical Reduction”

The Washington, D.C. studio showcases the type of workplace we create for our clients. It is a design philosophy we call “radical reduction,” a holistic approach that uses resources responsibly, and coalesces openness, mobility, sustainability, and wellness into a refined and tranquil experience.

Fostering an Equitable Office Community

No private offices exist in this studio. Staff at all levels sit among one another in the open workspace and share the same amenities, which—along with the conference rooms and collaboration zones—are designed to bring the whole group together.
